Paul Brenner, one of the army's elite undercover agents, has authority to arrest any military person anywhere in the world. He's always wondered how far he could push it . . .now he's about to find out. When troops find Captain Ann Campbell, a general's daughter, raped and murdered on the firing range, Brenner's instincts tell him to avoid the case. It can only mean trouble. But avoid it he cannot, and with an unlikely partner he uncovers the truth about the brass above him: that beneath the neatly pressed uniforms and the military code of honor hides a corruption as rank as Ann Campbell's own astonishing secret life.
