Chains of Deception (Peace in the Storm Publishing Presents) Jacqueline D. Moore

"What Happens in this house, stays in this house." Renee was a woman who seemed to have it all; a wonderful husband, loving family, wonderful church family, great job and the house of her dreams. She and her husband Gary have a very loving relationship. Or do they? From the outside, Renee's world gives the appearance of perfection. That is until a mysterious new broker by the name of Stephen Morretti begins working at the same firm with Renee. He is very charismatic and there is definite sexual tension between him and Renee. He will become the catalyst for Renee's voyage into a world of addiction. Regina and Joseph Michaels are Renee's doting parents. They are pillars of the church and looked up to in their community. They were always an integral part of Renee, who was their only child's life. Or were they? They know the truth behind the veil of lies that Renee has created for her survival. Aunt Lucinda is not only Renee's shelter in the storm; she holds the secrets of the past in her memories. She is who Renee turns to when her life starts to unravel; she will become the balm that allows her to begin to heal from the wounds of her present and her past. Uncle Larry is Lucinda's husband and her grandfather, Marcus Caine's, brother. He holds three generations of guilt and will try to make amends to his family for all the pain and grief that his brother has inflicted upon the three generations of women. Chains of Deception will take you on a journey of family secrets, betrayal, lust and lies. Generational curses and soul ties abound in this story of learning to heal from the wounds of our past and learning to forgive others as well as ourselves for the mistakes of our present.
