Elvin Bishop is fourteen -- an official Young Adult (and you know that one was dreamed up by an old adult). Having barely survived the sports camp that he and his best friends, Frankie and Mikie, attended in Slot Machine, Elvin is actually ready for high school to begin. Or so he thinks.

Suddenly, Elvin's hurled into a whole new social scene, where relationships -- the right relationships -- are the name of the game.

Leave it to Elvin to fall hard for exactly the wrong kind of girl -- the kind of girl who is definitely not a part of any guy's cool plan. And that's just the beginning of his problems. Because what happens when everything that used to be so simple -- like friendship--changes?

With an appetite that forces him to shop at the Big and Tall, a mother who still talks to her long-dead husband, and a nasty case of hemorrhoids, is becoming cool something that someone like Elvin can even pull off?

In this second book about Elvin, Chries Lynch has written the love story to end all love stories -- and a multilayered look at the hysterical trials and tribulations of one guy's introductions to Young Adulthood. The entire cast of Slot Machine is back: good-looking, popular Frankie; dependable Mikie; the ominous Senior Boys; and the sarcastic and loving Mrs. Bishop. This time, though, there are girls on the scene, and Elvin, who can keep on laughing when faced with an embarrassing mother, a menacing bully, ownership of the ugliest dog on the planet, and an adolescent case of hemorrhoids, confronts his biggest challenge yet: He's in love. Welcome to high school, where relationships, the right relationships, are the name of the game. Heartsick, heady, and hilarious, here are the hazards and halcyon moments of the intricate high school social scene and the love story to end all love stories as only Chris Lynch could write them.
