This book is a summary of the Third Rosa Barba European Landscape Award held in Barcelona, Spain in November 2003. The European Landscape Architecture Biennial has become a point of reference for European landscape design and has expressed the desire to investigate and debate landscape intervention from the perspective of its own discipline and from the viewpoint of other fields involved in research and construction. The goal is to explore the limits of various new approaches to nature in order to understand and learn from its idiosyncrasies.
